

The Appeal Letter

Combat Denied Claims & Get Paid What You Deserve!

It Took HOW LONG To Appeal That Denial?

One of the chief complaints about appealing denials for patients is that it takes too much time to do it well.

Some might even say it takes too long to do it poorly thanks to poorly designed insurance company appeal processes.

So, do we not do it?

Do we do it half-heartedly with a simple uncustomized “please reconsider” appeal letter?

Or do we defy good sense and sound time management practices in order to don our capes, sharpen our “I call BS” argument skills and write a highly specific appeal letter with a clear demand for quality review?

Are you ready to start demanding a high quality medical review process from payers? Do you want to make sure that when you submit records, they are not just read by payers but also understood?

Tammy Tipton, President of Appeal Solutions, will discuss how to assess appeal responses for signs of a poor quality review in the upcoming webinar, “Medical Necessity Appeals And Demanding A Quality Review By The Payer.” The webinar will be April 10 at 11 pm CST. Strategies for demanding peer review, peer discussion, expert review and complete clinical disclosure will be explained.

Level II medical necessity appeal customizations will be demonstrated so that none of your higher level appeals are rejected due to "no new information." Further, participants will be given 14 medical necessity appeal letters to make it easy to use these well-worded demands for quality review.

Sign up today for this webinar and get a FREE 30-Day PRO AppealTraining.com Membership and 1 CEU Credit. You'll get unlimited access to over 40 video training courses, 1600 appeal letter templates, and much more! Sign up today to attend our Medical Necessity Webinar for only \$297.
